Scott was broke and needed money and he needed it fast, as he had a big date with his dream girl the next night. He called his best pal Jesse and told him the situation. Jesse said, “Don’t worry buddy. I got you covered. Meet me at Michael’s summer house tonight.” Scott was confused at why Jesse would want to meet at Michael’s summer house as it was always boarded up for the winter. He figured however, that Jesse always had good ideas and he wouldn’t let him down.

Jesse and Scott arrived at Michael’s summer house at the same time. Jesse told Scott that the plan was to rob Michael’s house because there was a safe full of money inside. Scott didn’t want to rob Michael but followed Jesse as they walked up to the front door.

Michael had previously given Jesse a key to use in case of an emergency. Jesse struggling to unlock the door in the dark, got frustrated, broke a small pane of glass, reached in and unbolted the door. Jesse and Scott both walked into the house. Jesse went straight for the safe while Scott stood in the entryway frozen with fear. Scott realized that this did not seem right and decided to tell Jesse he was leaving. Before he could do so, Frank, the local security guard, pulled up to the house. Jesse had triggered the silent alarm.

Scott, upon seeing Frank, fainted in fear, knocking over Michael’s expensive cow shaped vase, shattering it. Jesse, unable to open the safe, heard the loud thud, and came running out of the bedroom. He saw Scott passed out on the floor and Frank approaching. Jesse began kicking at Scott in an attempt to get him up so that they could get out of there. Scott did not move. Jesse pulled out a gun and pointed it at Frank telling him to back off. Before Jesse got to his car to leave, he pistol whipped Frank until he thought he was dead. Frank, alive, but bleeding, could see Scott in the entryway begin to regain consciousness. Fearing Scott may also have a gun, Frank shot and killed Scott.
